NO. 2 NOW READY. THE CITY ARCHITECT. SERIES OF ORIGINAL DESIGNS

DWELLINGS, STORES AND PUBLIC BUILDINGS, Adapted to Cities and Villages. Illustrated by Drawings of Plans, Elevations, Sections, Details, &c. BY WILLIAM H. BANLETT.

Twenty Numbers will complete the work. Each number will be complete in itself, and be devoted to a special object.

The great success of the Cottage Architecture has encouraged Mr. Hanlett to commence this work, which, as its nam generally. One of the great wants of our large towns is that of a basement, an ornamental plazza, &c. The dimensions of thes, houses are 18 by 34, with a double window in each story, the risgra forming a sort of draperied arch, so that it affords all the shelter and shade required without in any manner obstructing he light or air. From an examination of the plans, it will be seen that these houses contain all the conveniences essential to the requirements of an ordinary genteel family, and such is the economy of space, that the reduced dimensions are hardly ob-servable. The cost of a block of six houses, finished according to the plan and specifications given, would hardly exceed tw thousand dollars each.

a block of eight houses on a lot of 100 feet front. These are of a more ornamental character externally, and with but little varia-tion in the internal arrangement. Instead of a basement there is an extension in the rear for a kitchen. The block is suris an extension in the rear for a kinchen. Though small, these houses unite every convenience for comfort and health, with the natural taste for elegance of appearance which must always be consulted in dwellings designed for people of education and refinement. The cost of these houses will not much exceed six hundred dollars each.

SMITH, esq., the author of "Dick Turleton," "Minnis Grey," "Charles Vavasseur," bc., has deemed it necessary to make the following announcement: A short Tale of his, under the title of "FRED GRAHAM; On, MASKS AND FACES," concluded by him in twelve chapters, has been spun out by the introduction of cheracters and inhidents which have nothing to do with the original work. An attempt has been made to pulm this literary rorgery on the reading public as the work of Mr. Smith, while it is in reality the production of some vulgar, low-included literary back. This is a gross injury to the fair fame of this distinguished author, as well as an imposition upon his numerous readers in this country.

THE REV. SPENCER H. CONE, D. D.

(Propared by His Family.)

An elegant lamo, volume, $425.

Notice from The N. Y. Evening Mirror:

"It is only a few months since the death of the Rev. Dr. Cone, at which time it was announced that a full record of his life would soon be prepared, as the best monument to his memory, and to gratify the general desire of his friend and admirers, in and out of the great denomination of which he was one of the most since this great denomination of which he was one of the preparation of this record fell to the hands of his sons, who, aided by the counsel fold and cherished co-workers with the lanented deceased, have ably fulfilled their delicate task—if task it may be called—in the handsome volume before us. The volume is a profoundly interesting life memorial of one of the most active, extrect, eloquent and sincerely religious spirits of his age and extererion—vigorously and consecutively skatched, and interespensed with precious tributes from many eminent witnesses to the noble and calightened zeal, the commanding influence, and the unawering faitheless of that spirit in its great work.

"Spencer H. Cone was a very remarkable man. Gifted by nature with crezy personal advantage, he added thereto more grace and accomplishments than are often developed among men. As early as 1817 he had become one of the Board of Menagers of the Baptist General Convention of the United States which post he held through life. In 1823 he came to New York, and in 1844 was called from the Oliver street Baptist Church, to the First Baptist Church of New York, in Broome street, where he ministered the remainder of his life.

"From his entrance upon the ministry, wherever located, his winning eloquence, bearing burning boils of logic, drew crowds—his church was always crowded—wickshess was rebuked there by a bold tongue, that held nothing back in defence to feelshoon, custom or prejudice. But it was not aloue in the pupirit that he wielded a ministered the remainder of his life.

BY FRED. S. COZZENS.

Says The Springfield (Mass.) Republican:

"It is the best series of American sketches that has been issued from the grees in many months. Their humor is of the quiet kind, but perfectly irreastible. There is nothing coarse or broad, or strained or stilled; but a sense of the ludkrous and grotesque never sleeps, and bubbles up through every chink of the marretive in the most natural springs of humor. The sketches detail the pleasures of a quiet pursuit of life in the country, and, while hitting off the pains which walk hand in hand with those pleasures, the author does not omit the most exquaint descriptions of natural scenery, or those touches of pathos which are ever more children of the same family with those of humor."
